

Introduction to Bringing Your Business Processes Online

Going Global

To keep pace with a global marketplace moving on Internet time, organizations need to solve problems and exploit opportunities at a fast pace. Yet, the people needed for meetings, planning processes and conferences are located around the globe and busy around the clock.

Is your organization ready to expand your strategies and tools to align with the best thinking about supporting collaborative work in this fast moving, global environment?

If so, schedule a Group Jazz Introduction to Bringing Your Business Processes Online.

Leverage the Opportunity

Find out how your organization can take advantage of the opportunity to leverage Internet, Intranet, and Extranet technologies to:

- Develop and disseminate better practices faster
- Engage the right people at the right time in the right processes cost-effectively
- Increase ability of people to contribute to planning and other strategic initiatives across organizational boundaries

While hardware and software and networks are used to support these processes, it takes a lot more than technology to transition to and manage this new way of working.

Partner with a Pioneer

Group Jazz consultants have been helping organizations and their leaders leverage business processes with new technology or more than 20 years. Group Jazz has worked with IBM, Business 2.0, Hewlett Packard, PBS, Warner Lambert, Texas Instruments, Merck, City University of New York and other organizations around the world to incorporate innovative technologies and services to bring people together to engage in business conversations that achieve results.

Benchmark the Best

Successful organizations are implementing virtual management meetings, online conferences to share best practices, strategic planning projects, collaborative elearning programs, and global teams.

Learn how they have modeled applications on their organization's business processes, managing the variety of groups, agendas, schedules, and other contexts, the roles people play in the processes, and the many activities people engage in while participating.

Identify the critical success factors associated with effective implementation such as: training team leaders to work virtually, reshaping organizational culture to support new structures and processes, and addressing necessary changes in measurement and reward systems.

Get Ready to Take the Next Key Steps

The deliverable from this project is a one-day intensive workshop presented on site in your organization. Participants from your organization will gain:

- A framework for looking at the full landscape of tools, technologies, processes, and approaches to leverage your organization's strategic goals
- A scan of best practices from the experience of other global organizations
- A set of practical tools you can use to engage people in your organization in a strategic conversation about virtualizing business processes
- A process that will enable participants to identify a set of next steps

This workshop can give you a jump-start to get your business processes online so you can begin gaining the advantages now.
